

The PLAYers Invitational Tournament Wrap-Up

Boys 14-18

So much action occurred during our first major of the year within this division. A very tight field, and some first tour starts for some players to watch out for: Ethan Armendarez, Brian Schoonover, Ian Valderas, and Korben House. A rivalry is beginning to take shape between last week's champion Kaisone Chanthapanya and this week's champion Collin

Ethan Armendarez swings as TJ Rodriguez is on stand-by

Price. In point totals Collin edges out Kaisone after this event as their one-shot differential in score proved all the more serious heading into the tour's "bye weeks." These young men are definitely cooking up some entertaining golf; so much so, that it caught the attention of a couple First Tee – Dallas players that wished to join our tournament (A huge thank you to the Lewallen family for participating). It is still early in our season, but the race is definitely on!

Lorelei O'Donnell takes charge of girls 14-18

Girls 14-18

A shift has occurred within the girls 14-18 division. Last week's champion Malisone Chanthapanya missed our first major of the year, therefore allowing Lorelei O'Donnell to take heavy command of the girls 14-18 division. However, our season is far from being done and many shifts will take shape as the season continues. As this group grows, pay close attention to the tightening of the points race. We know Chanthapanya will be back with a vengeance!

Boys 11-13

The theme this week must have been rivalries as another has absolutely become to flicker a light flame in this division. Last week's champion, Steven Suges, fell one stroke short of tying for the lead with Joshua Wozniak. The points race is tightening up throughout the division entirely. Some players made jumps forward and others stayed roughly the same. We saw tour starts from Brayden Tapia, Landon Cassidy, and Austin Tran. This group is one to look out for; anything can happen if anyone misses one event! Keep up the good work guys!

Girls 11-13

Two new faces entered their first two starts at our tour's first major; rising stars Savannah Cain and Meghan Tran. With two more girls added to the mix, the competition is definitely beginning to heat up. Maggie Pham is showing signs of running away with the points early, however, players like Sailor Chen and Madison Cox are poised to catch her; they sit in the second and third spots. Keep up the hard work ladies and go show the course who's boss!

Sailor Chen fires away on the Par 3, 7th hole

Boys 7-10

A new competitor has shown up to the tour and after one great round, has the cup points leaderboard in his grasps; his name: Ricardo Omaña. He fired in a low round 41 for this group and took over the race, but it's far from over. Last week's winner missed this event, and upcoming star Joseph Martinez placed 3rd. This is such a talented field and clearly anything is possible. This may be our most highly contested group!

Ricardo Omaña nails a drive off the No. 1 tee

Girls 7-10

Naomi Phan may have won both events on tour thus far, but the arrival of Victoria Sugés to the tour is only a sneak peak as to what a rivalry these two will have in the very near future.

This field is going to tighten up very quickly with more points being available; anything can happen. Victoria fired off a nice round of 37, which was good enough to beat her older brother, Steven, for the very first time. That's some girl power right there!

Victoria Sugés along with older brother Steven

To see tournament results and current Race to the Cup standings, go to www.firstteefworth.org/racetothecup.

Thanks Y'all